WILL GO TO THE TRAINS

Rooms Will be Assigned at Headquarters Uptown; Reception Arranged for Thursday Night

Great plans are being made for the entertainment in Maryville next week of the teachers of Northwest Missouri, who are to hold their annual convention here Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 23, 24 and 25. The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce last night arranged to have the chamber's committee on transportation meet five of the trains Wednesday and Thursday.

Automobiles, accompanied by student from the college, will carry the visiting teachers from the railroad stations to the headquarters up-town on Main street, where there will be waiting a list of the available rooms. The teachers will be assigned to rooms, and escorts will be provided to see that they reach their destinations safely.

During the teachers meeting, the annual show of the Nodaway County Agricultural and Domestic Science Association will also be in progress at the college. This is expected to be of great interest to the assembled teachers.

ADDS AN EXHIBIT OF APPLES TO THAT IN OFFICE OF C. OF C.

Ed N. Malvern of West of Quitman Brings in Some Stark's Delicious, an Unusual Type Here

Ed N. Malvern of west of Quitman was in Maryville this morning with a bag of excellent specimens of Stark's Delicious apples to add to the exhibit of Nodaway county products in the office of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce. This exhibit has grown in size and numbers rapidly of late and will soon include samples of all the best and unusual things produced in the county.

Mr. Malvern's apples are of an unusual type for this part of the country. The Stark's Delicious, which was originated by the well known nursery at Louisiana, Mo., is a pear-shaped red apple of real sweetness and odor. It is grown to some extent in southern Missouri and in the irrigated districts in the west, but Mr. Malvern says he knows of no one else who is raising it in this county. He has five trees five years old; eleven, three years old; and eighteen, one year old. The apples he brought to Maryville are from the five-year old trees.

All the apples Mr. Malvern has now are red. He says he intends to start next year the raising of the new yellow variety of the same type.

GOT YOUR HUNTING LICENSE? COUNTY CLERK HAS IT READY

About the Only Thing You Can do for Nothing is to Fish in Your Own County, He Says

Now that the hunting season is picking up, County Clerk Fred Smith is looking for an increased demand in the hunting license business. Although the permits are good only until the first of the year, a good many buy in the fall so as to have a chance at the ducks. Some sort of a license is necessary for hunting anywhere, but you can fish in your own county without a license, says Mr. Smith.

However, fishing licenses are necessary for fishing anywhere else. Mr. Smith has several varieties of each kind of license. He is aided in his trade by E. E. Tilton, deputy state game warden, who nabs folks without licenses and takes their orders.

A Nodaway county hunting and fishing license is good in the adjoining counties, says Mr. Smith, which means that you can hunt ducks on the Missouri river under its protection.

So far, 445 county hunting licenses have been issued. They cost a dollar. About 400 were sold last year. Fourteen state resident hunting and fishing licenses have been sold at $2.50 apiece. One non-resident hunting and fishing license has been sold. This cost $10. Nine non-resident fishing licenses have gone out at $3 each. Twenty-four state resident fishing licenses have been sold at a dollar each.

This shows a total of receipts of $541 for this county.

Sugar Shortage and Strikes of Coal Miners and Longshoremen Will Get Attention

Disregarding all advice and the warning of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, the longshoremen, at a meeting at Cooper Union, voted to continue the strike. Not all the avenues to a settlement were closed, however, as the longshoremen voted to pass on the question again this afternoon.

R. R. MEN TO GIVE TWO WEEKS TO PREVENTION OF ACCIDENTS

Fortnight Beginning October 18 Has Been Designated as the Time by the Director General

By the afternoon of October 17 approximately 325,000 railroad men in the central western region will have resolved to go fourteen days without sustaining a personal injury to themselves or being the cause of another's injuries.

The fortnight beginning at 12:01 a. m. October 18 has been designated by the director general of railroads as the "National Railroad Accident Prevention Drive," and, according to a statement issued today by H. A. Adams, regional supervisor of the safety for the central western region, the lines under his jurisdiction are endeavoring, through their officers and employes, to eliminate accidents to a greater degree than was shown in the June "No Accident Drive," when a reduction of over 78 per cent was effected.

Every individual employe has been reached by some member of the safety department or representative from the safety committee, which has some employe from its particular class of service as its representative in safety matters.

Just imagine: Over 2,000 safety committees, made up of approximately 33,000 committeemen—an average of 17 men on every committee—meeting in regular session one day out of each month to discuss and correct hazardous conditions and unsafe practices reported by the employes themselves. This gives you an idea of the great activity of the safety organizations on the railroads under federal control.

How do the employes themselves take it? Here is what one has said: "An employe, to be just to himself, his family, the public and his fellow man, in the advocacy of safety work on the railroads, should not hesitate to make the same contention for the elimination of a dangerous physical condition or a dangerous practice that is obviously a menace to life and limb, and to property, and which can be corrected, as he would make for an evident shortage in a pay check."

It is believed that the National Railroad Accident Prevention Drive, to be carried on over the entire United States, will cause a great rivalry among the roads and the men to go the entire period without a casualty. Everyone will be on his metal to prevent actual suffering or grief as a result of railroad accidents, and reaching the goal will make this campaign well worth while, thereby establishing a precedent that can and should be maintained.

Officers and employes of railroads, and through them the general public, will know each day what is being accomplished during this specialized period of accident prevention by daily telegraphic reports.

WON FAME AS ADMINISTRATOR

Sir William Macgregor Will Long Be Remembered for His Good Work in West Africa.

Sir William Macgregor was not the least of the bits of good luck which this empire owes to the Scottish strain of it. In the far-sundered areas of West Africa and the Western Pacific he achieved distinction which will not pass.

The world knew more of him as Pacific high commissioner than as governor of Lagos, but to many Europeans in West Africa, and to those folk of long memories, the African races, he will always be Macgregor of Lagos, the pioneer sanitarian who began processes which have made Lagos a place livable for the European and more livable than ever before to its teeming African population.

The pedant may say that "circumspice" scarcely applies where the benefactor has only cleansed air and roads and purified water sources; nevertheless, to no man could it be attached more fitly than to Macgregor for his work in that steady hive of activity. The natives had a real affection for him, for they knew he believed in them, and Africans, like most other sons of Adam, esteem that even above good drains and pure water. He had a very clear appreciation of the terrible danger of German rule in the tropics just because of its thoroughness.

There are endless stories of him on the coast. One is of an official who, after a tour in the bush, told the governor of an exceptional juju he had seen—"exactly like a human being, sir, only, of course, of wood."

"Nane sae exceptional," Macgregor remarked, and followed it up with a chuckling soliloquy, "I've seen some in the ser-r-vice."—Manchester Guardian.

PLENTY OF ROOM IN TRUNK

Small Receptacle Once Sufficed to Carry All the Worldly Goods of Noted New Englander.

Following the discovery, not long ago, of an interesting old trunk in which Daniel Webster carried his legal papers comes the finding of another old trunk that George Nixon Briggs, a former governor of Massachusetts, carried on his back when he pilgrimaged from the town of Hudson, N. Y., to Adams, Mass., there to begin studying law. Governor Briggs has not remained so fixed in memory as Daniel Webster, but he was a famous man in his time, and is interesting today because at the national temperance convention in 1832 he took a stand for total abstinence. Later, as president of the Massachusetts Legislative Temperance society, he marched in procession through the streets of Boston, although on this occasion there is no record that he carried his trunk. The trunk, incidentally, is one of the little ones common a hundred years ago, and Governor Briggs in later years repaired it, and affixed a card telling how he had brought it with him to Massachusetts. "It contained," he wrote, "my entire worldly estate, all of which was not worth $10."—Christian Science Monitor.

"Mugwump."

The modern word mugwump is derived from the Algonquin "mugquomp," meaning a great man, a chief, and is said to have been used among the Indians and whites of Massachusetts and Connecticut in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The word was later used in a humorous, or satirical sense, and was applied to a person who thought himself of consequence and importance. In this sense the word was long in local use and often appeared in print. In U. S. political history the term was first applied in 1884 to the independent members of the Republican party who openly refused to support the nominees of the party for president of the United States, and either voted for the Democratic or Prohibition party or abstained from voting. The word was not generally known in any sense before that time, but it caught the popular fancy and was at once accepted by the independents themselves as an honorable title.

Energy Released in Combustion.

A piece of coal releases, during combustion, enough energy to lift itself about 2,000 miles, or say from New York to Panama, vertically upward against constant sea level gravitation.

A piece of hydrogen, our most energetic combustible, releases in combustion an amount of energy capable of lifting about four times as far, or to a vertical distance (against sea level gravitation) roughly equal to the distance from New York to Manila.

But a piece of radium emanation yields without any combustion an amount of energy in the process of its evolution that would lift it against sea level gravitation, not only to the sun, but to the orbit of the planet Neptune, the outside fencepost of the solar system, and which is about thirty times further from the sun than the earth is.

Deadly Intoxicating Liquor.

Zanzibar furnishes one of the most deadly strong liquors that man can drink and still survive the ordeal. Its strength is so great that the natives who use it must accustom themselves to it by first starting with a sip, gradually increasing the portion as they become more hardened. It is said that if a stranger to its great intoxicating power partakes of it in even the same measure as absinthe he is lucky to escape death. This abnormally strong liquor is called "zerambo."

CARNAHAN GAINS TWENTY POUNDS

Although 69 Years of Age He Works Like He Did Thirty Years Ago —Tanlac Builds Him Up

"If I had not found Tanlac I don't believe I would be alive today," said J. W. Carnahan of 1414 Third Street, South, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, recently, in relating his remarkable experience with the medicine.

"Last October," he continued, "I went to Nitro, West Virginia, to work in the ammunition plant, and as they were paying extra good wages I got greedy, overworked myself and broke down. Until that time I had never suffered from any serious illness, but now my stomach was all out of order and I was so run down that I couldn't work without just playing out completely. I never wanted anything to eat and what little I did force down gave me trouble.

"I have never had much faith in medicines, especially the advertised kinds, and never took two dollars worth in all my life. But after reading what others said Tanlac had done for them I got a bottle and it certainly is wonderful how quickly the right medicine will get a person to feeling right again. I had not taken but a few doses of Tanlac until that knotty feeling left my stomach and I began to straighten right up. The medicine has put me in shape to where I have actually gained twenty pounds in weight, and, although I am sixty-nine years old I can do as much work as I could thirty years ago.

"Today I shoveled dirt over a nine foot wall for five hours, unloaded cement for two hours, then started unloading lumber, and came home feeling all O. K. I can eat just anything I want and lots of it and then get hungry between meals, and nothing I eat gives me the least trouble. I want to emphasize the fact that I have not had an ache nor a pain since right soon after I commenced taking Tanlac. I simply feel like years had been added to my life. I expect to always keep a bottle of Tanlac on hand. It beats anything in the way of medicine I have ever seen or heard of and I recommend it to al my friends when I hear them complaining of not feeling well again."

Here is another instance of the remarkable reconstructive powers of Tanlac. Mr. Carnahan is only one of many thousands who have taken it with the same wonderful results. Tanlac proved of great benefit to him because it contains medicinal properties which enrich the blood and promote a healthy appetite for nourishing food. Tanlac has been very successful in overcoming nervousness and sleeplessness, not from a quieting effect on the nerves, for it has no such effect, but by strengthening the nerves and bringing back the normal state of health through its effect on the appetite and nutrition of the body.

"Tanlac is sold in Maryville by Koch Pharmacy, in Conception Junction by A. M. Colly, in Pickering by H. M. Lincoln, in Burlington Junction by Coster Pharmacy, in Barnard by Bear Drug Co., in Elmo by King Drug Co., in Clearmont by Dr. W. H. Wiley, in Ravenwood by C. A. Shunk, in Arkoe by Rufus R. Smith, in Hopkins by Hopkins Drugs Co., and in Parnell by F. L. Hart." ADV.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.

"I was talking with my neighbor, Mr. Webb, the other day, regarding the great trouble his stomach had given him. He said he suffered 7 or 8 years, and had been almost at death's door a number of times from acute indigestion and bloating of gas, which seemed to shut off hsi heart action. He said he wouldn't have lived much longer if he hadn't taken Mayr's Wonderful Remedy when he did, which made a well man of him." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. For sale at the Maryville Pharmacy and by druggists everywhere. (Adv)

Does your stomach feel bloated after eating? Do you have sour risings, heartburn, spells of dizziness and constipated bowels? If so, Prickly Ash Bitters is the medicine for you. Men who use it find it exactly suited for such disorders. Price $1.25 per bottle. Maryville Drug Co., special agents. (Adv)

Farmers Trust Company

Maryville's Bank of Personal Service

THE FARMERS TRUST COMPANY is an organization of people co-ordinated under one business head for the purpose of rendering efficient service to other people who constitute its clientele. It is this fact—the fact that the Farmers Trust Company is not a machine, but a live personality — that makes it possible for it to be called "The Bank of Personal Service."

The bank is necessarily divided into several departments to better facilitate the work of handling the various forms of service that it renders, and each of these departments is under a head who is assisted by a number of people who have the personal interest of that department and the patrons of that department uppermost in their minds and hearts. The two largest departments are the department of General Banking and the department of Farm Loans, which are directly under the supervision of the principal officers of the bank, Mr. Wilfley, Mr. Kemp and Mr. Pierce. The other departments are supervised by other officers and employees and while they are smaller in scope, they are of equal importance in making the Farmers Trust Company a bank of real personal service.

The Departments of the Bank

THE DEPARTMENT OF GENERAL BANKING is under the direction of Mr. G. L. Wilfley, Mr. S. H. Kemp and Mr. A. K. Frank, assisted by Messrs P. D. A. Duncan, Francis Barmann and M. H. Hamilton, with Miss Jessie Fisher, stenographer. In this department every effort is made to give good banking service. The officers are always ready and willing to consult with its patrons regarding business or financial affairs, its cashiers and tellers are prompt and accommodating and it is equipped with the most modern facilities for the proper handling of its business and the care of all matters entrusted to it. The accounts of every depositor receive equal attention and every person employed in this department has a personal interest in the welfare and prosperity of its patrons. This department can truly be called one of "personal service."

The Farm Loan Department

The department of Farm Loans is under the direction of Mr. W. C. Pierce, assisted by Mrs. May Randel, his secretary, and Mr. H. D. Snyder, with Messrs W. H. Allen and Kyle Phares, field men; W. N. Deatherage, title attorney; Murray Welling, cashier and H. H. Allen and A. C. Barnett abstractors, and Miss Frances Miller, stenographer. This department has recently been enlarged, and its scope of usefulness extended until it operates in more than twenty counties in the northwest part of the state. It offers an exceptional personal service to the farmer, and especially now that the future of the industrial activity of this part of Missouri depends so largely on the extension of agricultural pursuits. No other department of the Farmers Trust Company could more truly be called a personal service.

The Trust Department

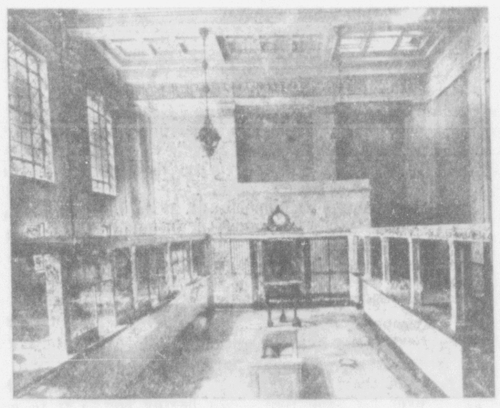
The principal officers of the bank have charge of its trust functions, and also its service in fiduciary matters such as the making and execution of wills, handling of trust estates and acting as administrator, executor or guardian. This is a very personal service and one that demands the most confidential care and unquestioned integrity. The institution, a trust company, unlike persons, does not die nor move away, and is always here to perform the duties of executor, or whatever function is entrusted to it by one who dies intestate. The bank's officers are always glad to consult with anyone about the important matter of the disposition of estates.



INTERIOR VIEW OF BUILDING

The Savings Department

This very important department of the Farmers Trust Company is under the personal supervision of Miss Nora Ritze, who takes a most earnest interest in its patrons and who has made a special study of this branch of banking for the express purpose of helping people to save money. The same care is given to the handling of the account of the little newsboy as that of the multi-millionaire, and the bank believes that everyone should have a savings account, no matter what his financial circumstances may be. This department is of much interest to the women patrons of the bank, and they are given every consideration, worthy of a bank of real personal service.

The bank maintains a private telephone exchange in connection with the transit department, which is in charge of Miss Anna Lehmer.

Thoroughly completing the service of the Farmers Trust Company, all legal business is in charge of Shinabargar, Blagg & Ellison, attorneys.

The Bank's Location

The Farmers Trust Company is located in a beautiful building of which it is very proud. Its architecture is really magnificent, and its appointments are very fine and absolutely complete for the convenience of its patrons and the conduct of its business. This building was erected by the bank for its own use about 3 years ago and has since been continuously under the care of Charles L. Martin, who gives it his undivided personal attention in keeping it in perfect order inside and out.

You are very cordially invited to visit this bank at any time and to make use of it as your bank for your own personal service.

'TWAS A REAL BALL GAME AT CONCEPTION COLLEGE SUNDAY

Score Was 2 to 0 Against K. of C. Team; Junior College Players Defeated St. Patrick's

The Democrat-Forum's informant yesterday must have got the runs confused with the hits made by the Knights of Columbus baseball team against the Conception College team at the college Sunday, in the celebration of Columbus Day. The score was 2 to 0 in favor of the college, according to our correspondent, who sends us the box score, and the K. of C team made only one hit. The college on the ocher hand, made only three hits off Brennan, who pitched for th knights.

Says our correspondent:

Columbus Day was a victorious on for Conception College. A doubl header was staged, and both games resulted in a college victory.

The first battle was fought betwee the St. Patrick school team and the college junior team, ending with eigh runs for the college and three for St Patrick's school.

The second contest ensued between the K. of C's of the county and the college senior team. This was a genuine game, in which all the player proved to be real sportsmen. A large crowd was present at the college grounds to witness the game and were not the least disappointed.

Although the K. of C's struggled bravely and showed the right spirit their opponents went over the top with a score of 2 to 0.

A HEALING LOVE.

When forth into life's rough highway they fare
To make anew each old mistake
And hide themselves with error-purchased care,
Let not the old home love forsake
Them in that piteous hour of sorest need
As in a hostile world they roam.
Instead, this gentle resolution heed:
Love still shall wait for them at home.

The wrong things they may do you'll not condone;
Still is no need to stand aghast
Or speak to them in harsh and chiding tone—
God knows they know, and it is past.
One time you kissed the baby hurts of them
As they sobbed to you, in the gloam.
There'll be no lack of those who will condemn—
So let love wait for them at home!
—Strickland Gillilan, in Farm Life.

REALLY NO NEED TO WORRY

But Then, You Know, Some Mothers Get So Worried Over the Merest Trifles.

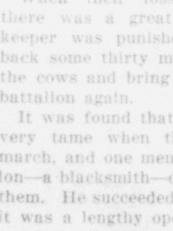
Uncle Ben was a bachelor, but was full of enthusiasm for his married friends, and when his brother-in-law invited him to come and spend a few days and see his son and heir he gladly accepted. It was an education to watch the old gentleman's efforts to amuse the six-months-old child. Just for fun he would snatch its bottle away at feeding time and wonder why the youngster yelled.



Then he would tickle it almost into convulsions. Finally he gave it his watch to play with. Then peace reigned. And thus the mother found baby and bachelor.

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed excitedly. "Look! Baby's got the watch in his mouth. He'll swallow it. Take it out or he'll choke!"

"Don't be alarmed," replied Uncle Ben, smiling placidly; "I've got hold of the chain. It can't go far!"

MASCOTS THAT WERE USEFUL

British Regiment Adopted Two Cows, Which Accompanied Them Throughout the Entire Campaign.

During their march through London a short time ago the Second Scots Guards were accompanied by two cows and many wondered why they were in the procession.

They were originally acquired by the regiment in 1915, when it was in Belgium, and remained with the battalion through the whole war.

They were the means of supplying fresh milk to the officers and sergeants, and a special man was told off to act as cow keeper. It is said that one day their keeper, being behind the battalion and somewhat merry, disposed of the animals to a farmer in exchange for a trifling sum.

When their loss was discovered there was a great uproar, and the keeper was punished by being sent back some thirty miles to repurchase the cows and bring them back to the battalion again.

It was found that the cows became very tame when they were on the march, and one member of the battalion—a blacksmith—determined to shoe them. He succeeded in doing this, but it was a lengthy operation, occupying nearly ten hours.

When he had finished the animals were well shod, with iron plates covering the whole foot.

These cows were perhaps the largest mascots possessed by any British regiment.—London Answers.

Not Fully Equipped.

The major had been back from France just two weeks. His figure had changed so that he had to lay in a complete new regalia of "civies." Then, in all his sartorial glory, he called on her. Father and mother were there to hear all about how he won the war, and he was just in the mood to tell them.

Leaning back importantly in the big Morris chair, the center of an admiring little group, he started in. His fiancee blushed and her mother giggled. Father smiled broadly. The major felt ill at ease. Something was wrong.

Then he followed father's gaze. To his utter amazement, the major discovered that his socks had rolled down over his shoe tops. Not having had any use for them for nearly two years he had forgotten to get any garters.

Old Safe Gives Up Treasure.

For years at Lufkin, Tex., a rusty old safe has decorated one of the side streets, a seat for loafers and a hitching place for horses. The combination lost years ago finally rusted off and the other day some of the town kids pried the safe open, finding 12 85 gold pieces, 40 silver dollars, and a block of stock in one of the town's leading corporations. The boys gave up the stock, but kept the cash. Somebody some day must have known there was money in that safe. Why didn't they get it out?—Exchange.

Wasted Sympathy.

"You know last night they got into the grocer's, broke open his safe and took $3,000."

"He should worry! He'll get that back in a few days."—New York World.

"What has become of the Hon. Flushdub, who did everything he could last session to handicap the army?"

NATIONAL BUDGET SYSTEM PROPOSED

BILL TO BE REPORTED TO HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

HARD FIGHT IS EXPECTED

President Wilson Has Consistently Urged the Enactment of Such a Law to Save Money

Washington, Oct. 14. — A national budget system, a scientific step forward in the interests of national economy, is about to come before congress in the form of a bill to be reported to the house of representatives by the appropriat ons ocmmittee. Although a stubborn fight is expected to be made upon it by old-time congressional privateers, jealous of their historic privilege of spending the government's money with lavish hands, it is expected that the measure will pass. As President Wilson has consistently urged the enactment of such a law there is no question of its approval.

Democratic and Republican leaders of progressive tendencies have realized that something must be done to abate the waste of money that is annually appropriated by congress, hence the efforts for budget legislation in the Sixty-sixth congress have so far met with less opposition than ever before. Most of the other large nations of the earth are administered on the budget plan, and the United States has been practically alone in its legislative appropriation system.

Will Differ From Others.

The bill as at present drawn will differ materially from the budget laws of other nations, this being due to the difference in the American style of government and placing of responsibilities. Former President Taft, an ardent advocate of a budget, and Carter Glass, secretary of the treasury, another espouser of the project, have been heard by the committee and their views obtained as to what they believe the bill's salient features should be.

The United States government has at the present time a law permitting the revision of estimates, but it contains no provisions for the machinery necessary for investigation of the desirability of the recommendations.

If the budget bill now being involved by the house appropriations committee becomes a law there will be two major officials in charge of the work. First, there will be a director of the bureau of the budget, or some similar title, who would be appointed by the president and subject to confirmation by the senate. His salary will be $10,000 a year, and he will have an assistant at $7,500. He will be assigned a sufficient force to investigate all claims for appropriations and to keep tab on the necessities of the various departments, not only from month to month, but day to day.

Director Under President.

The director of the budget would be directly under the president, and on him the chief executive would largely depend for his departmental estimates and general information.

The other official will be styled the auditor general. He, too, will be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, and it is planned that he be subject to removal only by resolution of both senate and house for misconduct, incapacity or other such cause. This would remove this important office beyond the reach of politics. His salary would be commensurate with that of the budget director, and he also would have a suitable staff. The business of the auditor general would be to check the appropriations, revenues and expenditures of the government, so that congress may obtain at a moment's notice figures on the state of the national finances and everything relative to expenditures.

A Sop to the Old-Timers.

It is considered possible that congress may recommend, or insist, upon a joint committee of supervision of everything concerning the budget. If done this will be a sop to the old-timers who today resent any interference with their ancient powers of disbursing the public money. As a matter of fact, the auditor general plan has been worked out with the idea of securing to congress the control of all expenditures, but this may not satisfy some senators and representatives.

The departmental estimates will be called under the proposed law to the attention of congress by the director of the bureau of the budget, as stated, while the auditor general, on the part of congress, will report on their practicability as regards the prospective revenues, state of the treasury, etc.

HEROISM IN NAVY EVEN AFTER WAR

U. S. FLEET COMPLETES SWEEPING MINES THAT IT SET

WAS TRAP FOR U-BOATS

Barrage of 70,000 Laid in North Sea to Control Submarines; Taking Them Out Is Dangerous

Washington, Oct. 11—The clearing of the North Sea mine field has been accomplished. As America insisted on this barrage against the Germans and contributed to laying it down, so she has done her share by way of finishing the job. Secretary of the Navy Daniels acknwledged this terse military message from Rear Admiral Joseph Strauss, commander of the mine forces of the Atlantic fleet:

"Finished sweeping North Sea barrage of American mines."

From the armistice until early last spring the navy department laid its plans for gathering up the mines it had sowed. Then the mine sweeping fleet of four thousand officers and seamen steamed into Kirkwall, whence it began the work of sweeping up 70,000 American-laid mines. It has been completed, and while accounts of the work have been meagre, it has come to light that there have been several casualties, and that the tales of heroism will rival the most valorous accomplishments of the war.

Task to Lay the Mines.

To lay this field of mines and prevent the operation of German submarines out of the North Sea was a Herculean task. People in this country remember that the first German trans-Atlantic submarine Deutschland stole out of the North Sea under the nose of the British trough the passage between Scotland and Scandinavia. With American boys being transported across the Atlantic by the millions, President Wilson was unwilling to take this chance on the "subs" and insisted that the north passage of the seas be blocked. Immediately plans were developed by the navy and the work of laying down 70,000 mines started. The Americn forces laid 57,000 of these. This practically put an end to German operations through this opening, as it was almost impossible for an unwarned ship to make passage, and it was upon the knowledge of this successful bottling up that Admiral Jellicoe predicted the actual control of the German submarines.

Was a Dangerous Undertaking.

After the armistice came the work of clearing the mines, rated as one of the most hazardous undertakings of the war. Rear Admiral Strauss, who had directed their laying, was chosen to clean them out. In the British navy men are given special bonuses for mine operations and additional bonuses for every mine cleared. In our navy the men work "for the honor of America and the American navy." And when they go out to invade a mine field they go out to ride over tons on tons of destruction that explodes, not by contact, but by contagion. All a vessel has to do is to get within the vicinity of the latest type of American mine, and—BLUEY!—up she goes. A column of alabaster rises from a vast sea base of jade, the seams of the ship are ripped open and often the craft or parts of the craft itself are hurled skyward.

This is what the American mine sweeper had to brave. The ships of the fleet were fitted with an electrical device that minimized mine action to a certain extent and careful handling of the craft and cautious operations avoided any great number of casualties. Two officers and ten men are the known casualties. The few stories that have driften back from the isolated fleet indicate these casualties have been principally some officers and volunteers who have gone out into imminent danger themselves after ordering other members of the crews out of the danger zone.

Salvaged Under Difficulties.

One of the most remarkable stories of the expedition was the salvaging by Captin R. C. Bulmer of the U. S. S. Pelican after she had been ripped open by a mine. This vessel was worth a million dollars to the government and five vessels were utilized in a high sea filled with mines to cradle it in. At one time ,when it looked certain the Pelican was going to lose its fight and go under, the twelve seamen who had voluteered to man her gathered in the stern for just one care-free moment to sing "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here!" and snatch a cup of coffee and a sandwich. Then plunging back to their pumps and driving their relief back to the other ships they rode the ship through the crisis and brought her safely into dry dock at Kirkwall.

Shortly afterwards Captain Bulmer lost his life in an explosion. The name Lieutenant Bruce of the U. S. S. Bobolink will go down in naval history as will that of Captain Bulmer. When the drag wire of the Bobolink became fouled with a mine he drove his crew forward and with another officer and a sailor attempted to extricate the wire. The mine exploded before the wire oculd be released ,killing Bruce. In a similar manner Lieutenant Harmer of the U. S. S. Patuxent was injured.

Daniels Sends Congratulations.

Responding to the terse message from Rear Admiral Strauss, Secretary Daniels cabled the following congratulations to the men of the mine fleet:

"It is with the greatest of pleasure that the secretary of the navy congratulates the officers and men of the North Sea mine detachment on having so creditably completed the stupendous task of clearing the North Sea of the mines planted by our navy during the war. This most arduous and dangerous work, one of the greatest and most hazardous tasks undertaken by the navy, and which has been carried on with cheerfulness and integrity, will go down in the annals of naval history as one of the navy's greatest achieveemnts. Every loyal citizen of the United States and every officer and man of the navy must look with pride upon these men who have once again fulfilled the glorious traditions of the service which they represent."

Of the thirty-six submarines and mine destroyers that composed Admiral Strauss' fleet only five avoided accident in some form, but little serious damage resulted. The ships are all repaired or in dry dock, and the American navy has accomplished another feat thot her allies thought would be almost impossible.

DRAFT OF RARE POTENCY

But Traveler Who Indulged in Kava Tells Us Nothing About the "Morning After."

"Menike," he said to me, "you know that to drink kava you must be of empty stomach. After eating, kava will make you sick. If you do not eat as soon as you have drunk it, you will not enjoy it. Take it now, and then eat quickly."

He dipped a shell in the tanos, tossed a few drops over his shoulder to propitiate the god of the kava here drinking and placed the shell in my hands. Ugh! The liquor tasted like earth and water, sweetish for a moment and then acid and pungent. It was hard to get down, but all the men took theirs at a gulp, and when Kivi gave me another shellful I patterned by them. A ringing came in my ears as when one puts a seashell to them and hears the drowsy murmur of the tides. Kivi laughed, and vaguely I heard his query:

"Veavea? Is it hot?"

"E, mahanahana. I am very warm," I struggled to reply. My voice sounded as that of another. I leaned harder against the wall and closed my eyes.

A peace passing the understanding of the kava-ignorant was upon me. Life was a slumbering calm; not dull inertia, but a separated activity, as if the spirit roamed in a garden of beauty, and the body, and suffering, all feeling past, resigned itself to quietude. I heard faintly the chants of the men, as they began improving the after-feasting entertainment. I was perfectly conscious of being lifted by several women to within the house, and of being laid upon mats that were as soft to the body as the waters of a quiet sea. It was as if angels bore me on a cloud. All toil, all effort was over; I should never return to care or duty.

I was then a giant, prone in an endless ease, who stretched from the waterfall at the topmost point of the valley to the shore of the sea, and above me ran in many futile excitements the natives of Atuona, small creatures whose concerns were naught to me.—Exchange.

TOOK THE SCENE LITERALLY

But Not Many Movie Spectators Are as Unsophisticated as Was Uncle Ted Prouty.

A prominent movie director, said at a luncheon in Los Angeles:

"Movie audiences are very sophisticated nowadays. They insist on accuracy. If you are inaccurate in the smallest detail they write you hundreds of jeering letters. It wasn't so in the past.

"The movie audiences of the past were as naive as Uncle Ted Prouty. Uncle Ted came to town one evening and went to the theater with his wife. In the first act a woman was shot, and when the curtain went down a good many men left their seats and went out.

"Uncle Ted fidgeted a while and then he took his hat and started out in his turn.

"'Where be you goin'?' his wife asked.

"'Look here, Hannah,' said Uncle Ted, 'I've stood this thing jest as long as I can, and now I'm goin' out like the rest to see how that pore woman is gettin' along that was shot. The unfort'nit wretch may be dead by this time, and if she is this ain't no place for us.'"

Hans Christian Andersen.

Hans Christian Andersen, styled the children's poet, was a celebrated Danish writer, born at Odense in 1805 and died at Copenhagen after a brief illness, August 4, 1875. His last years were unharnessed by criticism and attended by all the honor and love that should accompany genius combined with old age. As the child of poor, shiftless parents, he had little instruction and few associates, but his dramatic instinct was developed by Fontaine and the Arabian Nights, and the visit of a theatrical company to his native city led him to seek his dramatic fortune in Copenhagen, where for four years he worked diligently but produced nothing of note. In 1835 he essayed the "Fairy Tales," by which he was to receive world wide recognition. The classic "Tinderbox" and "Big Claus and Little Claus," are also of this year. A short time afterwards "Only a Fiddler" gave him a European reputation.

Beautiful Marine Organisms.

A beautiful marine organism which floats in tropical seas is not a single creature, but a colony of many individuals, connected with each other like Siamese twins, and of several different kinds. The largest and most brilliantly colored is inflated with gas and floats on the water surface. All the other members of the colony hang from its under side. Some are small and trumpet-shaped and do the feeding for the entire community. Others are fingerlike and are "feelers." Still others resemble bunches of grapes. These are egg layers. Another kind are like long streamers and extend down into the water to act as "drag anchors." They are also armed with "sting cells" to slay young fishes, which they afterward draw up to the hungry mouths

PRICES OF BUTTER AND EGGS ADVANCE; CHICKENS GO DOWN

This Year Shows a Considerable Increase Over Last; Withdrawals From Storage Help Supply

Chicago, Oct. 13.—In the "Monthly Crop Reporters" published by the department of agriculture for September, there is some interesting information on the values of dairy products. The comparative values September 1 show as follows:

| | 1919 | 1918 |
|---|---|---|
| Butter | 49.7 | 41.4 |
| Eggs | 41. | 36.4 |
| Chickens | 25.7 | 22.8 |

Since the above report was issued there has been a further advance in the value of butter and eggs, with lower prices prevailing on chickens, due to decline in value of other meat products. Producers of butterfat and eggs are particularly fortunate that the prices have not declined.

During the past week there has been very little change in the amount of butterfat delivered to the creameries, and the quantity is insufficient for current use. Reserve stocks are being used liberally in all centers of population.

Abundant rains over the producing sections have produced more favorable conditions for increased production and a slight increase in the make is expected.

The production of eggs is falling off. Due to this prices have reached such a high level that further advances are not looked for in the very near future.

The warehouse reports show heavy withdrawals of eggs from storage to make up deficiency in current production.

Receipts of poultry show very large increase during the week, indicating that fall marketing has begun in earnest which has necessarily brought about some reduction in prices.

The most important factor at the present time is the ability of the produce plants throughout the country to take care of the poultry as fast as it is being marketed.

WILL ROAR TOWARD GERMANY

Position of Sculptured Lion on Famous Battlefield of Waterloo Is to Be Reversed.

The lion on the battlefield of Waterloo is to face the other way, and before long it will stand with open, ponderous paws roaring silently, after the manner of your fierce but considerate sculptured lions, toward Germany instead of France. Fortunately for the quiet of the countryside the roar is imaginary or the lion would long ago have become a nuisance whichever way he faced. The lion was set up by Belgium after the battle of Waterloo, and stood as a warning to France not to engage in any more Napoleonic dreams of conquest; and year after year it looked toward France, while behind it Germany prepared for the next effort to dominate other nations. It maintained its attitude while Germany carried through the program that separated Alsace-Lorraine from France; but presently behind the lion's back Belgium began to fortify, and eventually left him in the ridiculous position of looking in one direction while the Belgian fortifications looked in another. A tame lion, one might say, roaring for the edification of tourists and with no personal feeling about it. But now Belgium decides to turn him round and let him roar foward Germany as a solemn reminder of the unwisdom of dreams of world conquest.

THINK TERM IS EFFEMINATE

Some Tenn's Players Object to Word "Love" as at Present Employed in Scoring System.

There is talk among the overlords of tennis of finding another word than "love" to mean "nothing" in the scoring system, for, although it may surprise many to hear it, the game is sometimes spoken of as effeminate, and this bit of terminology is held responsible. Nobody has ever explained why "love" means "nothing" in tennis, but there is a footnote in an old and rare book about card-playing which refers to an old Scottish word "luff," which meant "nothing," and this, perhaps, may have been somehow transferred into the game of tennis. Or, again, the term may be of far eastern origin, where a word sounding like "love" was used in the old form of tennis that was once popular in the orient. Whether or not the terminology undergoes change, the game is in no immediate danger of falling off in popularity, and the repeated shouting of these seeming endearments across the tennis net has occasioned much innocent merriment.—Christian Science Monitor.

Honor Cuban Generals.

Cuba is to pay honor to the memory of General Maximo Gomez, the island republic's military hero, by erecting a costly monument. A first prize of $25,000 was awarded recently to Aldo Gaba, an Italian sculptor, for a model of the memorial, which is to cost $200,000. Second and third prizes went respectively to Huertas Cabarrocas, a Spanish-Cuban, and Gutson Borglum, an American. General Gomez became popular as the leader of the Cuban forces in the war for independence from Spain, from 1895 to 1898. He also took a prominent part in the Ten Years' war, a revolt which began in 1868. On the day of his death, June 18, 1905, the general's family was presented with a gift of $100,000 by the government of Cuba. At the conclusion of the Spanish-American war, General Gomez was honored at a public reception given by the American forces occupying Havana at that time. —Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Helium Gas Cheapened.

Up to 1915 the total output of helium gas in all the world had probably been less than 100 cubic feet, and it was worth about $1,700 a cubic foot. But just before the armistice was signed a shipment of 150,000 cubic feet of helium gas was sent to Europe, and it costs less than 10 cents a cubic foot.

Helium gas was first discovered on the sun, by spectroscopy. It is the best gas for use in balloons, because it is not inflammable. It is now extracted from the natural gas of Texas and Kansas.

The method is delicate and complex, but is based upon the fact that the principal constituents of natural gas liquefy when cooled to about minus 329 degrees F., but that helium remains a gas at that temperature, and hence is easily separated.

Surveyors Use Airplanes.

Four airplanes are being used to survey the extensive forests of Labrador to determine the value of the wood pulp represented by the growing trees. Aerial photographs will be taken of many parts of the peninsula for use in compiling statistics. The surveying party, which left the United States recently for Nova Scotia, is composed of 40 persons and is headed by a man who served two years as a captain in the British air forces.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Rich Gift to Museum.

THE COMPROMISE

By GLADYS P. ANDERSEN.

Mrs. Adams was making preparations for the noon meal when the door opened quickly and a girl about sixteen rushed in, quite out of breath.

"I'm here at last, mother."

Mrs. Adams glanced up from her work. "I was calling Vivian," she said.

"Why, mother, I am Vivian." The girl threw back her curly head and laughed merrily. "Won't you ever be able to tell us twins apart?"

"I thought by the way you came in through the door 'twas Virginia. She always comes in like a shot from a gun. Where have you girls been?"

"Down by the river. The wind blew so we did not hear you when you first called."

"Well," said Mrs. Adams, "Miss Emery has just been here and invited both of you girls to her musicale next Wednesday evening.

"She said it was going to be just grand. Professor West, who has just returned from France, is going to sing. He is Sergeant West now, you know."

"You said she invited us both?" Vivian gasped.

"Yes, dear, and I am afraid you will have a hard time deciding," her mother answered.

"There's nothing to decide. It's Virginia's turn. I went to the sociable last month, you know. Oh, how I wish we had more than one best dress!" she exclaimed passionately.

It was not until Wednesday morning that Vivian appeared to cheer up somewhat. She had a consultation with her mother, who interrupted her by exclaiming, "It will never do. Of course there's no harm in it, but if you get into any trouble, don't blame anyone but yourselves."

"No one will ever know about it," responded Vivian confidently.

"I'll go down to the village now and call at Mrs. Blake's. I know she will be willing."

Mrs. Blake lived across from Miss Emery's, and she received Vivian cordially.

That evening, Virginia, in her pink silk muslin that belonged to her and her sister jointly, went timidly up the path leading to the Emery home, feeling very happy.

Miss Emery, in beautiful brocaded silk, was passing through the hall when Virginia was shown in by the butler.

"Which one is it?" she asked. "I'm sorry you both couldn't have some." Virginia was placed where she could see everyone who played or sang. Then she gave herself up to enjoyment. She watched Sergeant West eagerly. It was only in dreams that she had ever heard such tones.

Sergeant West saw her and met the vivid glance of her eyes.

He turned to his hostess and said, "Can that young lady sing?"

"Indeed she can," answered Miss Emery proudly.

The next moment Virginia felt a hand on her shoulder. She looked admiringly into Sergeant West's face. "Will you sing for me?" he asked.

"I will play for you and you may sing what you please. Are you willing?"

"I'll try," she answered shyly.

It was nearly an hour later that Sergeant West again remembered the girl.

"I want you to sing once more," he said. "I have a plan. You have a voice, and with teaching, you could become a singer. Perhaps I can arrange to give you a couple of hours each week."

"I'm afraid I am a bit timid," said the girl, "but since you ask me I will try."

He was sorry for her as she stood by the piano. Her face was very white, and her lips almost stiff.

"Have courage," said the singer. "You did so well before."

The accompaniment began; but when an untutored, but rich contralto voice commenced the song there was a sudden discord among the keys of the piano, and Sergeant West wheeled about and stared at the trembling girl beside him. "What does it mean?" cried the artist.

"It cannot be possible that this girl has two distinct singing voices, one very high and the other very low."

The girl at whom everyone was now looking, tried twice to speak before she could say a word. Then she stammered, "I—I am the other twin if you please, sir."

"You are not the one that sang first?" he asked.

"No, sir, that was my sister, Virginia. It was her turn with our dress—"

Vivian stammered, then was silent. One half-hour before, Virginia had slipped out unobserved and met her sister at Mrs. Blake's. In their hurry in exchanging gowns, Virginia had not told her sister she had been obliged to sing.

The next morning Sergeant West returned to New York. While he was waiting for his train, he saw two girls in plain gingham gowns, hurrying down the road. It was Virginia that spoke for both.

"Sergeant West, we could not help coming to see you off—and to thank you."

Happiness shone in two pair of eyes when he answered, "I shall not forget the lessons I am to give you when I return next month."

CHEESE ENTITLED TO FAME

Traveler Asserts Product of Northern France Has Any Like Edible Beaten a Block.

If perchance we had fared into one of the northeastern provinces of France we were reasonably certain the meal would be rounded out with helpings of a certain kind of cheese that is indigenous to those parts. It comes in a flat cake, which invariably is all caved in and squashed out, as though the owner had sat upon it while bringing it into the market in his two-wheeled cart.

Likewise, when its temperature goes up it becomes more of a liquid than a solid; and it has an aroma by virtue of which it secures the attention and commands the respect of the most casual passerby. It is more than just cheese. I should call it mother of cheese. It is to other and lesser cheeses as civet cats are to canary birds—if you get what I mean; and in its company the most boisterous Brie or the most vociferous Camembert you ever saw becomes at once deaf and dumb.

Its flavor is wonderful. Mainly it is found in ancient Normandy; and among strangers eating it—or, when it is in an especially fluid state, drinking it—comes under the head of outdoor sports. But the natives take it right into the same house with themselves.—Irvin S. Cobb, in Saturday Evening Post.

MAN MERELY POOR SECOND

Swiftly as Aviators Travel Through the Air, the Swallow Easily Outflies Them.

Doubtless the swiftest passage over a long distance ever made by man was that of the daring aviators who flew from Newfoundland to Ireland. They traversed a space of 1,932 miles in 972 minutes. That was at the rate of nearly two miles a minute. To be precise, it was a mile in 30.18 seconds. For a much less distance a slightly higher speed was made by an army airplane between Boston and New York. The distance of 175 miles was made in 83 minutes. That was a mile in 28.45 seconds, or more than 185 feet a second.

That is rapid traveling. It is not, however the swiftiest aerial flight known. A swallow could literally fly round and round one of those airplanes when the latter was at top speed. Carefully conducted tests by a French scientist have demonstrated that the speed of a swallow in full flight sometimes goes as high as 290 feet a second, or at the rate of a mile in 18 seconds, while the ordinary flight of a swallow is 210 feet a second or considerably faster than the airplane.

GOVERNMENT RELEASES MEAT TO GO IN ITS RETAIL STORES

Bacon is an Especially Good Purchase; Advice Given on How to Handle Canned Meat

All meats placed on sale by the government through their retail stores are released for sale in large quantities to anyone wishing to buy. Municipalities, dealers, charitable institutions, churches, organizations or individuals may buy in any quantity of these commodities.

The bacon included in this sale is the very best quality of this class of bacon and is considered by for the best bargain of any food the war department has to offer. It may be purchased either by crate or in cans.

It must be understood that this is not the class of breakfast bacon for which we pay large sums per pound in the retail stores. However, it is exceptionall well cured, palatable bacon. This is an opportunity for individuals in the community to lay in their winter supply of different kinds of meat at very small cost.

It is necessary that this consignment of meats begins to move and be distributed where it is most desired. Send your mail order for any amount to the Zone Supply Officer, Mail Order Department of the United States Retail Stores, 1527 North Broadway, St. Louis, Missouri.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Bacon—12-lb can—per can | | $2.75 |
| Bacon—in crate—per lb | | .20 |
| Beef, corned—1-lb. can, per can | | .23 |
| Beef, corned—2-lb. can | " " | .45 |
| Beef, corned—6-lb. can | " " | 1.75 |

| Beef, roast—6-lb. can | " " | 1.90 |
| Hash, corned beef—1-lb. can | | .22 |
| Hash, corned beef—2-lb. can | | .37 |

Although a large quantity of bacon in crates is not available at this point, orders for same will be taken care of and filled from warehouses.

The following is of particular interest to housewives, for the benefit and general information of women who will find these meats useful:

1. To one can of canned beef chop an onion fine, stir in a half teaspoonful of celery salt, add salt to taste and cook as a stew.

2. Take one can of this canned meat, stew until the gravy becomes thick, until the substance is of a consistency to hold itself on a platter; season to taste with tomatoes or any desired addition of this nature, and garnish it with strips of green or der peppers, parsley, etc.

As this met is of the finest quality of canned meat you will find that these suggestions will assist the housewife in the preparation of an exceptionally well prepared dinner.

Movie Actors Use Yellow Grease Paint; Here Is How They Found It

Nearly everybody knows that yellow grease paint has almost universally superseded the use of pink flesh tint for motion picture make-up purposes, but few know why the change was made, how it came about and who effected it. It's an interesting story, this story of the change, and it is probably told here for the first time.

The man responsible is Marc McDermott, now appearing in B. A. Rolfe productions. When Mr. McDermott made his first picture he found that all of the players at the Edison studio the scene of his initiation into the mysteries of silent drama making, used a flesh tint, which, as he soon discovered, was unsatisfactory. In varying lights it photographed in varying tints, sometimes a chalk-white, often a gray, frequently a gray-black. Because of this variance an actor sometimes had a chalk-white face when he ran up a flight of stairs and a gray-black visage when he entered the room used as a setting for the following scene. Efforts to overcome such obvious gradations from naturalness were as futile as they were frequent. Finally Mr. McDermott unwittingly stumbled upon the solution to the problem.

Being something of an amateur photographer and pen and ink artist, Mr. McDermott made his own greeting and announcement cards, combining photography with sketching. Just before his first Christmas on the screen he started to manufacture some Christmas cards. He bought a print of a colored Japanese sketch, photographed it, ran off the required number of prints and was in the act of mounting one of them when his attention was suddenly attracted by the fine natural tint he had secured from the yellow printing ink used to color the face of one of the characters. Immediately the thought occurred to him: If the yellow printing ink will reproduce to a natural tint, why not yellow grease paint for make-up? He decided to seek an answer to his query by experimentation.

A few days later he appeared on the Edison stage with a light-yellow make-up which caused a mild sensation among his fellow players. Director and cameraman condemned the revolutionary idea on sight, but Mr. McDermott was insistent that it should be given a trial. Test scenes were made and after projection on the studio screen a recommendation went forth that from then on only Mr. McDermott's yellow make-up be used on the Edison stage. Now it is the tint generally used in every studio.

VIRTUES OF MISSOURI NOTED BY GOVERNOR IN A BOOKLET

St. Louis, Oct. 14.—Although eighteenth in size as compared to other states of the Union, Missouri ranks fifth in productivity, Governor Gardner declares in an introductory statement in an illustrated booklet issued by the Agricultural section of the United States Railroad Administration, compiled for the benefit of home seekers. The booklet describes Missouri as the of "Diversified plenty" and contains information compiled by agricultural representatives of the railroads running into the state and authorities on the state's industries and possibilities.

Gov. Gardner, in his article, explaining his ranking of the state as fifth, says his figures are based on tabulation of several years, including small fruits and all the smaller lines of farm production along with wheat and the major crops.

"Viewed from the larger angle of profitable livestock production in its broader economic relation to agriculture and home economics, Missouri rank still higher and is among the very first in apples, corn, hogs and cattle, and other rural industries and as the land of opportunity for coutry life investments and for home building, we believe that it is at this time the peer of any state in the country."

The farm production of Missouri in 1918 amounted to $940, 504, 910, the booklet says. It places the state as second in winter wheat, third in livestock, seventh in population, ninth in wealth, and "a properly balanced state at every angle of agricultural effort, a good place in which to live, and the coming center of the dairy industry."

Thirty-four million, five hundred and ninty-one thousand, two hundred and forty eight of the 43,958,280 acres in the state are devoted to 277,244 farms averaging 124.8 acres each.

USE BUZZARD AS AIRPLANE

Rice Birds Take Free Rides Apparently for the Pure Fun of the Thing.

Size and strength are popularly associated with victory, especially among the lower animals, but in many cases this is far from being the case, particularly in the bird world. Among the rice flats of the Carolinas there abound at some seasons tiny rice birds, birds so small that it takes two dozen for a good meal, even though bones and all are eaten.

The great buzzard is found circling over the flats at all times. He dreads the time for the rice bird to come, for he is then nearly pestered to death. It is a common sight to see one of these tiny creatures fly up to a buzzard, and, after dodging this way and that around the awkward bulk, finally alight well forward between the buzzard's wings on the back. Here the little passenger grabs a few feathers in his beak and holds on for grim life. After enjoying a ride for as long as he desires, the little fellow hops off and is gone.

The peculiar feature of the whole performance is that apparently the only purpose the rice bird has in getting on the back of the buzzard is to take a free ride. It puzzles every one who chances to see the little play to find any other reason; yet the fact remains that it is a frequent occurrence, and the little birds seem to enjoy it hugely.

NOT ALL A CHESTERFIELD

Writer Outspoken in His Definition of What Is Known as a "Perfect Gentleman."

Somewhere in the back of every man's mind there dwells a strange, wistful desire to be thought a Perfect Gentleman. And this is much to his credit, for the Perfect Gentleman, as thus wistfully contemplated, is a high ideal of human behavior, although, in the narrower but honest admiration of many, he is also a Perfect Ass. Thus, indeed, he comes down the centuries—a sort of Siamese Twins, each miraculously visible only to its own admirers; a worthy personage proceeding at one end of the connecting cartilege, and a popinjay prancing at the other.

I go so far as to think that the man is rare who is not sometimes a Perfect Gentleman, and equally uncommon who never is anything else. Adam I hail a Perfect Gentleman when, seeing what his wife had done, he bit back the bitter words he might have said, and then—he too—took a bite of the apple; but O! how far he fell immediately afterward, when he stammered his pititable explanation that the woman tempted him and he did eat! Bayard, Sir Philip Sidney, Charles Lamb, St. Paul or Socrates would have insisted, and stuck to it, that he bit it first.—Exchange.

Making a Garden.

And because the breath of flowers is far sweeter in the air, where it comes and goes, like the warbling of music, than in the hand, therefore nothing is more fit for that delight than to know what be the flowers and plants that do best perfume the air. . . . That which above all others yields the sweetest smell in the air is the violet; especially the white double violet which comes twice a year, about the middle of April and about Bartholomew tide. . . . Then wall flowers, which are very delightful to be set under a parlor or lower chamber window; then pinks and gilliflowers, especially the matted pink and clove gilliflower; then the flowers of the lime tree; then the honeysuckles, so they be somewhat far off. Of beauflowers I speak not, because they are field flowers; but those which perfume the air most delightfully, not passed by as the rest, but being trodden upon and crushed, are three; that is, burnet, wild thyme and water mints. Therefore you are to set whole alleys of them, to have the pleasure when you walk or tread.—Francis Bacon.

Not Infallible.

Human judgment cannot be infallible, no matter how broad the mind or keen the intellect. Appearances are so deceptive that even the most experienced judge of character may fail to reach as good an estimate of a man as the humble ignorant scrub woman, who cleans out his offices daily. Many successful men realize this great lack in themselves, and appreciate the power that is in the hands of a devoted wife and real helpmate. They would not think of entering into a partnership or a big business deal without first arranging to hear the opinion formed by her whom they have learned to look up to and confide in.

And, indeed, a man can scarcely pay a higher tribute to a woman than the trust he shows in her instinct.

Bluebird Heralds Spring.

The bluebird is among the first, often the first, to arrive in spring in the northern part of the United States from the southern states where this aristocrat has been spending the winter, says the American Forestry association, Washington. Sometimes more hardy bluebirds will pass the winter as far north as southern New England. The bluebird builds its nest in bird boxes, or in crannies about buildings or in holes in trees, particularly orchard trees. It lines the bottom of its nest with grasses for the four or five blue-white eggs which it lays. The female is paler in color than the male bird.

CATTLE PRICES STEADY AND LOWER; HOGS STRONG AT K. C.

Small Receipts of the Latter Yesterday Barely Meet the Most Urgent Requirements

Kansas City Stock Yards, Oct. 13.—Cattle prices were steady to 25 cents lower, hogs strong to 10 cents higher and sheep steady to 25 cents lower. Liberal receipts of cattle and sheep caused the weakness in those divisions, while hog receipts were barely large enough to meet urgent requirements.

Cattle receipts today were 41,000, and the largest thus far this year, showing an increase of 1,200 compared with a week ago and 6,000 ocmpared with a year ago. Hog receipts were 11,000, the same as a week ago, and 2,000 smaller than a year ago. Sheep receipts 19,000 were 9,000 larger than a week ago, and 3,000 larger than a year ago.

Good to choice fat cows and steers sold at steady prices, but the bulk of the arrivals were in the plain to fair classes and sold 15 to 25 cents off. No prime fed steers were offered. Some heavy Kansas steers sold at $15 and $15.25, and grass steers at $13 to $13.50. The bulk of the 900 to 1,050 pound grass steers brought $9.50 to $10.75. The bulk of the cows sold 15 to 25 cents lower. A good many Panhandle and Colorado cows sold at $7.25 to $9.25. Veal calves were quoted steady.

Trade in stock and feeding cattle was fairly active. Prices were steady for the best and lower for the other classes. Corn belt feeders are making large purchases, and will continue buying freely the next three weeks. Feeders are selling at $8.50 to $12.50, stockers $7.50 to $10.25, and stock cows and heifers $6 to $8.50.

Hog prices today were strong to 10 cents higher than late last week and $1 lower than a week ago. The top price was $15.70, and the bulk of the offerings sold at $14.75 to $15.50. Packers paid the top of $15.70. Prices are higher here than in Chicago. There is active demand for pigs and thin hogs for feeding at $14 to $15.50.

Sheep receipts were the largest for some time past and the bulk of the offerings were below choice quality. Western lambs sold up to $15.60 and native lambs $15.25. The market was quoted steady to 25 cents lower. Feeding lambs sold at $11.75 to $12.75, feeding ewes $6 to $7.

Unusual Feature at Empire Tonight.

Lyman H. Howe has secured a number of remarkable motion picture features for his silver jubilee tour, but none are of more sensational interest than his animated series showing a hand-car trip down the snow-capped Andes to the edge of the Pacific. Mr. Howe will bring his newest program to the Empire theatre tonight.

The trip starts in the lofty tips of the Andes, the motion picture party speeding through the tunnels, over high chasm bridges and through quaint villages until the ocean edge is reached. Stops are made to film the interior of a monastery in the lonely mountains, to picture huge herds of llamas and sheep and to photograph Peruvian village life. American audiences will find this motion picture of striking interest, since it is the first time that cameramen have visited the interior of Peru, the celebrated land of the ancient Incas. The pictures of the famous llamas of Peru will be of widespread interest, some remarkable closeups being given of this unusual animal. The llama is a member of the camel family and was first domesticated by the ancient Peruvians, who used it as a beast of burden, ate its flesh and wove the long hair into garments. The llama is found only in the Andes.

The Peruvian tour is but one of a number of unique features on Mr. Howe's anniversary program. This year Mr. Howe is taking his audiences upon a visit to the great Bethlehem Steel Works; "Water Nymphing," showing a visit to the famous Camp Wohela for girls on Lake Sebago, where the camera records some extraordinary diving and swimming; to the quaint and beautiful Magnolia Gardens, near historic old Charleston, S. C.; upon a thrilling tarpon fishing expedition off the Flordia coast; to the homes of and the haunts of the famous movie stars; and upon a camera hike over the Canadian Rockies. One decidedly novel film shows some startling clay modeling. The program will be rounded out with the usual delightful animated comedies and motion picture cartoons typical of Mr. Howe's Travel Festival. Mr. Howe's staff of artists have been at work for months perfecting these comedy gems for the silver jubilee program.
